The North Carolina Comprehensive Cancer Program Survivorship Summit is proud to feature an all-star lineup of speakers this year:

Keynote: Author and Speaker Joni Aldrich

When Joni Aldrich lost her husband, Gordon, to cancer, she thought she'd lost everything. However, she decided to channel her grief into a passion for helping others. Joni's books and seminars are full of cancer know-how, light-hearted humor, and inspiration. Based on her own experience and research, Joni has armed herself with knowledge that can help patients and caregivers when cancer invades their lives. For more information, please visit www.jonialdrich.com.

Richard McQuellon, PhD

Dr. McQuellon is a professor in the Department of Medicine, Section of Hematology and Oncology, at Wake Forest University in addition to serving as the director of the Psychosocial Oncology and Cancer Patient Support Programs at Baptist Medical Center. He has over 20 years of clinical experience working with cancer patients and their families.

Author and Humorist Christine Clifford

Diagnosed with breast cancer in December of '94, Christine went on to write a humorous portrayal of her story in a book entitled Not Now...I'm Having a No Hair Day! in addition to being a contributing author to several other cancer-related titles. For more information, please visit www.cancerclub.com.

Eugene Taylor

Eugene is a creative artist who has touched the lives and hearts of many people through his soulful voice and the unique sound of the Djembe drum. He has worked at REX Hospital since 2007 providing music therapy for dialysis patients and patients receiving chemotherapy in REX's Oncology Center.
